Let's take a look at the "behind the scenes" of the wood we use for our furniture.

Feel the warm summer breeze as you look out over the valley in Northeastern West Virginia. Hear the birds chirping as we hike back into the woods. Now we come to a tall oak tree that we've selected for harvest with a method that's called "selective harvesting". This means that we strive to take only the trees that are mature, or in need of thinning so that the other trees have more room to grow. After carefully felling the tree, we transport it to the sawmill where we cut the log into boards, which are then stacked on a skid with strips of wood between the layers to assist airflow. When it's air dried for approximately six to ten weeks, we then move it into our energy efficient solar kiln, powered only by the sun's heat and the wind. After being properly dried the lumber is then used to make high quality furniture "For You".
